

Rome Prize Names 2017-18 Winners Including Sanford Biggers and Rochelle Feinstein

The Rome Prize announced its 2017-18 winners this weekend. Each of the awardees will receive a residency at the American Academy in Rome lasting anywhere from six months to two years, as well as a stipend.

Among the winners in the Visual Arts category are Rochelle Feinstein, who is slated to have a Bronx Museum of the Arts retrospective next year, and Sanford Biggers, the New York-based artist known for his recent work about racism and police violence.

A list of the winners in the visual arts category follows below. For information about the 2017-18 grantees in architecture, design, and other categories, head over to the American Academy in Rome's website.
